

Kevin San Gabriel
301342241
CMPT 376W D100 Milan Tofiloski
Journal Entry #24

- MoS or manual of style is a manual to help wikipedia editors edit articles
 - MoS presents wikipedia's house style
 - wikipedia title should be consistent with article
 - article should have sections organized
 - section headings should be unique and not contain links
 - use commonly understood words and universally accepted terms (in the case of commonality between different languages)
- An article should use the formal English term for the type of English that has strong national ties
- Title of works should be given an initial capital for each word except less important words
 - Titles of people (pronouns) should be capitalized
 - At first occurrence of abbreviation, write out the full version, then abbreviating it afterwards will suffice
 - Italics are used for emphasis
 - Use straight apostrophes not curly apostrophes
 - MoS encourages wikipedia editors to avoid vague, unnecessary wording (increase readability of article)
 - MoS encourages that style and formatting be consistent throughout the article
 - Editors should not change a style from one to another if the first style is already deemed acceptable
 - MoS essentially aims to increase the readability of the 'technical' writing in wikipedia for readers.